WI SAMOAN 452

Samoan 452 will provide students with a theoretical linguistic framework through which to analyze the Samoan language. Special emphasis will be placed on the unique features of Samoan as a member of the Polynesian language family. When possible, aspects of Samoan grammar will be contrasted with other Polynesian languages. We will also look at the socio-linguistic and socio-cultural contexts of language use in Samoan society.

The course will be taught in English and Samoan and those with high proficiency in the Samoan language will be encouraged to complete the required assignments in the Samoan language. Class meetings will be conducted as lectures and discussions. Students are encouraged to present their own views of the Samoan language throughout the course.

Because the class is Writing Intensive, students will be required to write a great deal each week. Since the Samoan language competencies of students may vary, it is important that each weekly writing assignment be carefully reviewed by your peers in small groups and by the instructor. Each assignment will be returned to you for re-writing and re-submission for further comments by the instructor.

The writing assignments (described below) allow for enhancement of individual written communication skills in class topic areas. The re-editing of corrected assignments will enable students to improve their abilities to write in Samoan and English about the selected topics. Likewise, the focus on Samoan language and socio-linguistics in this course builds important background for the social and cultural context of the Samoan language and provides the prerequisite course work for entry into the native speaker level classes of Samoan 421, 422, 431, 432, and 461.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Reaction Papers (40 points of final grade)
Students are required to hand in weekly Reactions/Critiques of the assigned readings and class discussions. These papers should review and comment on the materials discussed in the readings and in the class meetings. They are handed in at next class meeting following the date of the assigned reading or discussion. The papers are from one-and-a-half to two pages in length.

Research Paper (30 points of final grade)
Student are required to write a short research paper on an approved topic related to the Samoan language. Papers may be written in Samoan or English, but you must demonstrate an ability to use the Samoan language as a research tool in the completion of the paper. Papers must be about 10-15 pages in length and must be developed through at least two draft forms before final submission. A summary of the papers will be presented orally to the class during the final two weeks. Only the written version of your paper will be graded.
There is no required text for this course. Handouts will be provided frequently during the semester. In addition, an extensive reading list will be provided so that students may prepare for class discussion or conduct further research into areas of interest.
